

Hollywood star Will Ferrell has been taking a break from his work as one of Tinsel Town's most successful comic film actors and spending a relaxing break at Beech Hill with members of his family.

Will had been invited to Ireland by the James Joyce Society to receive the annual James Joyce Award in Dublin. But he decided to take a driving tour and explore places he had never visited on previous stays.

At Beech Hill he chatted cheerfully to staff and other guests and said : "This is such a beautiful spot, so restful and relaxing. I certainly will be back again."