

ONE-HUNDRED WOMEN WANTED

Two leading professional organisations have joined forces for the first time to organise a unique, cross-border business-boosting event for professional women.

The Chartered Management Institute and Women in Enterprise are now looking for one-hundred women in business, education and in the public sector to take part in the exercise which will be held at the Beech Hill Country House Hotel next month.

Derry chartered accountant Dawn McLaughlin, one of the principal organisers, says the evening will combine good food and socialising with hard business promotion. Key speakers will be heard between dinner courses and women who are already running successful businesses will exhibit jewellery, beauty products, crafts and leisure opportunities, and they will be happy to give advice to newcomers to the world of commerce.

But, says Dawn, the accent will very definitely be on forming new contacts, building relationships and developing new business. "This is the first time that our two organisations have linked up in this way but we hope it will become an annual event which women from all parts of Ireland will attend," she says.

The business promotion will be held here on Wednesday, 7th May. Already more than 30 women have signed up for the occasion.
